Bitcoin Price Prediction: Drops to $46,000 Amid SEC Security Scandal and ETF Unrest

The price of Bitcoin fell sharply to $46,000, a decline of roughly 1.50% on Wednesday, in a market characterised by increased sensitivity to government measures. The most prominent cryptocurrency in the world has recently experienced some volatility, which coincides with reports of a security breach at the SEC in the United States.

False information about a Bitcoin ETF spread because two-factor authentication wasn't enabled. It heightened the already palpable sense of unpredictability and chaos in the digital asset market. The incident highlights the complex interplay between regulatory factors and the ever-changing bitcoin sector. The mood of investors and the direction of Bitcoin's price were both affected.

Lack of 2FA Led to SEC Account Hack, Confusion Over Bitcoin ETF

An important financial regulatory agency in the United States, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), recently experienced a security breach involving their official social media account. A SIM swap attack, in which the hacker obtains control of a victim's phone number, was the root cause of this incident, according to the X Safety team. The SEC's account, however, lacked the basic security measure of two-factor authentication (2FA), which facilitated the intrusion.

The image shows a screenshot of a tweet from the user 'Bitinning' (@bitinning). The tweet is marked as 'Breaking' and reports that X has confirmed a security breach of the SEC's account, which occurred due to a lack of two-factor authentication. The tweet includes the hashtags #Crypto, #Cryptocurrency, and #SEC. Below the main text is a screenshot of a message from '@Safety' on X, which provides a detailed confirmation of the breach. The message states that the account @SECGov was compromised, but the breach was not due to a system failure at X, but rather a third-party SIM swap attack. It also notes that the account did not have 2FA enabled at the time and provides a link to X's help center for more information on account security.

Breaking: X confirms a security breach—SEC account hacked due to lack of two-factor authentication.
#Crypto #Cryptocurrency #SEC

@Safety

We can confirm that the account @SECGov was compromised and we have completed a preliminary investigation. Based on our investigation, the compromise was not due to any breach of X's systems, but rather due to an unidentified individual obtaining control over a phone number associated with the @SECGov account through a third party. We can also confirm that the account did not have two-factor authentication enabled at the time the account was compromised. We encourage all users to enable this extra layer of security. More information and tips on how to keep your account secure can be found in our Help Center: help.x.com/en/safety-and-...

In the middle of the continuous anticipation of real SEC rulings regarding Bitcoin ETFs, the price of Bitcoin is currently hovering around $46,000. This occurrence emphasises the significance of strong security measures in avoiding misinformation and how the price of Bitcoin reacts to regulatory news.

The perpetrators of this hack made fraudulent claims about the approval of a Bitcoin exchange-traded fund (ETF). When the SEC explained that the news was false, the price of Bitcoin dropped below $45,000 after a sharp spike to $47,897 caused by this false information.

Latest News on Bitcoin Price

With its dominant position on CoinMarketCap, Bitcoin (BTC/USD) maintains its dominance in the dynamic digital currency market. On Thursday, January 10th, the live price of Bitcoin was $45,768.72, and the astounding volume of $38.86 billion was traded in just one hour.

Even though Bitcoin's value has dropped by 1.35 percent recently, its market cap of about $896.80 billion is still very healthy. 19.59 million BTC, out of a maximum of 21 million, are circulating, which helps to support it.

Bitcoin Price Prediction

Looking at the technical picture for the day, we find that $45,721 is Bitcoin's pivot point. At $46,306, there is immediate opposition; at $47,228 and $47,922 there are following hurdles. Important support levels that should be considered in order to avoid further drops are $45,230, $44,739, and $44,398.

From a technical indicators perspective, Bitcoin's RSI is currently at 57. This puts it in a bullish sentiment zone, but it's not quite in overbought territory (over 70), which could mean a price correction is on the horizon.

Bitcoin is now trading above the 50-Day Exponential Moving Average (EMA), which is at $44,708.0, indicating a possible short-term uptrend.

From what we can see in the charts, Bitcoin has just finished a Fibonacci retracement around $45,721, which is in line with the 38.2% Fibonacci level. At this crossroads, overbought conditions are already correcting, and a prolonged decline below this level would increase selling forces.

Ultimately, it appears that Bitcoin is heading in a cautiously optimistic direction, especially if it stays over $45,250. Bitcoin is expected to test its immediate resistance levels in the near future, according to dealers and investors.
