Blockchain technology and artificial intelligence are combined in the decentralised network known as Bittensor. Proof of Learning (PoL) is used to ensure that nodes deliver trustworthy AI models while maintaining user privacy. The decentralised AI ecosystem's use cases are expanded by its native token and cross-chain compatibility, TAO, which promotes collaboration.

Because it ensures that only nodes with successful artificial intelligence models receive rewards, the PoL consensus approach used by TAO is revolutionary. It maintains excellent performance and encourages the development of strong artificial intelligence technology within the network. Bittensor incentivizes node operators and AI developers with its cryptocurrency token, TAO. The token economy has made the network's community livelier and more involved, which fosters innovation and cooperation.

What's in store for the rest of 2024 and beyond for the decentralised machine learning network Bittensor, powered by artificial intelligence, and its token TAO? Now let's look at the technical analysis and price projection for TAO.

Bittensor (TAO) Price History

On March 6, 2023, the Bittensor network introduced the TAO token, which had an opening price of $93.4. The price of TAO dropped below its initial offering price, into the $76 range, within a week of its launch.

As of the beginning of April 2024, the price of TAO had dropped to $47, a 50% loss.

The TAO price dropped even lower to $30.83 in May, but it began to rise again, albeit only to $63 by the month's end. Before falling again in August 2024, TAO made a full recovery, reaching $86.18, which was slightly less than its initial price.

Up until October, TAO fluctuated at $54, but then it began to surge. November 2023 saw TAO in the $95 area, while December 15 saw a top of $379.

Before exploding to a record high of $757.60 on March 7, 2024—its highest price paid—TAO stayed in a slump until mid-January 2024. Bittensor TAO's value plummeted to $522 by April 2024, a further loss of over 25%.

Bittensor (TAO) Price Analysis

Summary:

- The price analysis of Bittensor indicates a positive trend at $560.
- Throughout the day, cryptocurrency recovered up to 18.97%.
- TAO bulls next aim for the $626 barrier level.

TAO/USD 1-day chart analysis:

The Bittensor coin price chart for the past day shows a rising trend. While market sentiment is generally bullish, it soared above $560 during the day. It has been rising above its moving average, which is indicative of a positive trend.

The Bollinger bands indicate the level of market volatility. Enhanced market volatility is being suggested by the rapid expansion of this region at present. Since the price has soared over it, the upper edge of the Bollinger bands indicator serves as support at $500.23. The Bollinger Bands indicator's lower side, which provides the most robust support, is at $153.22.

The RSI indicator indicates that the market is overbought. In the last day, it increased to 83.50. The relative strength index (RSI) graph shows a bullish trend with a steep rising curve. In the previous week, the cryptocurrency has made a large profit due to the fast acceleration of buying activities. Be that as it may, the indicator is always ready to issue a sell signal.

TAO/USD 4-hour chart analysis

A positive trend was validated by Bittensor's four-hour price study. Bittensor is worth $558.49, according to the chart. On the four-hour price chart, green candlesticks indicate strong purchasing interest. On the other hand, selling pressure indicators have shown up, which, along with rising volatility, could mean a turnaround is on the horizon.

On the hourly chart, the gap between the Bollinger bands is growing, which is causing volatility to increase. The increased volatility suggests that market unpredictability is on the rise. To add insult to injury, $549 is the support level where the Bollinger bands indicator begins to converge. Alternatively, $363.86 is the lowest point of the Bollinger bands indicator, which acts as the strongest potential support.

Over the last several days, the relative strength index (RSI) has been moving in an overbought trend, reflecting the increasing strength of the bullish momentum. With a current level of 84 and further higher movement, this indicates a bullish control. Since the bullish momentum is still very strong, this rising action implies that buying is picking up speed. This means that the market is stable and that the coin is doing very well.
