Is Hamster Combat Coin To Compete Notcoin?

Many Telegram users have begun to compare Hamster Kombat's meteoric rise to the prior success of Notcoin. With its easy-to-learn controls and the possibility of cryptocurrency rewards, this tap-to-earn game puts players in the role of a hamster CEO at a made-up cryptocurrency exchange.

The game has over 200 million participants, according to a recent social media post from the official page of the Telegram game. Among the estimated 900 million users of Telegram, it stands out as a considerable chunk.

On the other hand, the game's social media presence mirrors its quick expansion. One of the most popular games on Telegram is Hamster Kombat, which has about 46 million subscribers and nearly 10 million X-followers.

Also, it has a larger presence on X and YouTube now, and there is a lot of buzz and excitement about its imminent token launch.

Is Hamster Combat Coin the Next Notcoin?

When Hamster Kombat's cryptocurrency token launches on The Open Network (TONNE) in July, the anticipation will reach a fever pitch. Notcoin, a leading cryptocurrency with a market valuation of approximately $3 billion at its peak, is already a part of TONNE, a layer-1 blockchain that Telegram created.

People are wondering if Hamster Kombat would take a similar path because of this shared blockchain foundation. The rumours keep piling up as the Telegram game tries to cash in on its huge fan base and online following.

At the same time, it's worth noting that the game is becoming increasingly popular in Iran. Hamster Kombat provides a digital escape from the country's severe inflation, unemployment, and Western sanctions with its simple yet gratifying gameplay.

The Iranian government has reportedly taken note of this uptick in interest, per the Associated Press. They see the game as a manifestation of excessive Western influence. Also noteworthy is the timing, which comes as Iran readies for its presidential election in the wake of President Ebrahim Raisi's unexpected death in a May helicopter crash.

But the creators of Hamster Kombat aren't letting this derail their expansion plans, no matter how serious the political worries are. They hoped to repeat Notcoin's success by combining gaming with cryptocurrency rewards, thus they revealed their plan to create a token on TONNE in late May.

In the meantime, Notcoin's trading volume increased 27.18% to $479.25 million, and its price increased 11% from yesterday, trading at $0.01594. In the past day, the cryptocurrency has soared to a high of $0.01632. Additional data from CoinGlass shows that Notcoin's Open Interest increased by 23.23% to $179.79 million.
