Binance Coin (BNB) is a cryptocurrency launched by Binance, one of the largest cryptocurrency exchanges in the world. Designed to facilitate trading activities on the Binance platform, BNB initially debuted as an ERC-20 token on the Ethereum blockchain before migrating to its proprietary blockchain. The initial total supply was capped at 200 million coins, with a decreasing supply due to regular coin burn events aimed at sustaining value stability.

BNB stands out as a versatile cryptocurrency with diverse applications. It serves as a medium for trading cryptocurrency pairs on Binance DEX, a decentralized exchange powered by Binance Chain, highlighting its significant role in the cryptocurrency trading landscape. Furthermore, BNB supports crypto staking, allowing users to secure their tokens and earn rewards by contributing to network security. Additionally, the token unlocks access to various financial services, encompassing loans and insurance protection. Lastly, BNB can be utilized to fund projects via Initial Coin Offerings (ICOs) and other crowdfunding initiatives, showcasing its extensive practical utility.

Within the Binance ecosystem, BNB primarily functions as a utility token, offering users discounts on trading fees. Notably, the fee structure is dynamic, adjusting based on trading volume (over a 30-day period) and account tier.
