Will Bybit and Binance List Pi Coin?

Despite securing major listing on abovementioned crypto exchanges, with Binance and Bybit being significantly larger exchanges, a listing on these platforms could drive another major rally, possibly pushing Pi Coin toward the $500 milestone. Despite the momentum, the key question remains: Will Binance and Bybit officially list Pi Coin?

Pi Coin will not be listed on Bybit, as confirmed by the exchange's CEO. With millions of KYC-verified users, Pi Network wields considerable influence in the crypto space. As major exchanges focus on user engagement and trading volume, the stance of Binance on this matter has sparked significant interest. While Bybit has expressed hesitance, it remains uncertain whether Binance or other exchanges will adopt a different approach and decide to list Pi Coin. The possibility remains that Binance or other platforms could take the risk and list Pi Coin in the future.

Final Verdict: Will Pi Coin Hit $500?

Pi Network's progression from Mainnet to Open Network marks a significant milestone in its goal to build a more accessible and inclusive cryptocurrency ecosystem. With the mainnet launch just days away and major exchanges supporting its growth, Pi Coin is entering a pivotal phase.

Despite the surge in Pi Coin's price following news of its exchange listings, its future remains uncertain. While a potential listing on Binance or Bybit could drive the price towards $500, skepticism about the project's long-term viability persists. Investors should proceed with caution, as unverified exchange listings and the prolonged Enclosed Mainnet phase contribute to ongoing uncertainty.
