What Is Saitama Crypto?

Saitama is a community-driven decentralized finance (DeFi) platform built on top of the Ethereum blockchain. The name comes from an alleged ghost dog that roams around the Saitama prefecture in Japan, and the founders have remained anonymous.

Saitama's target market is Generation Z (people born between 1997 and 2012), 93% of whom feel irritated or confused with regard to cryptocurrencies. As such, the platform's goal is to make crypto simple, safe and easily accessible for younger investors, according to its whitepaper.

Crypto can be simple; Finance is for everyone; Community is power.

Just as its beliefs illustrate, Saitama aims to provide a community-driven token that empowers young people to adopt DeFi to help manage their finances.

Saitama ecosystem offers a range of products to drive education and adoption for crypto's younger userbase, which includes a smart wallet, marketplace, NFT platform and educational content platform.

It launched a digital wallet called Saitamask on January 8, 2022, which allows users to trade, stake, and store their cryptos, while accessing education on cryptocurrencies, gaming and NFTs. Education will take place in the form of entertainment based on the game characters of the Doge family.

Saitama underwent a security audit by crypto security company Certik, which saw it given a rating of 91%, with the token and its ecosystem being described as “relatively decentralised” and in the top quartile of projects for trust.

SAITAMA Token

SAITAMA is an ERC-20 deflationary token built for transactions on the platform, with tokenomics that benefit its holders. From every transaction, 2% is deducted and given to a pool of its holders as a form of passive income. Another 2% of every transaction is burned, a deflationary tokenomic system designed to make it more valuable.

In June 2022, Saitama carried out a token migration to a version two of the crypto (known as Saitama v2), which aimed to reduce the token’s supply, in the hope of improving its price. As such, Saitama v2 has a much smaller total supply than the original version, with the maximum supply standing at one billion against the original token’s quadrillion. One million original Saitama tokens can be traded for one Saitama v2 token.

Besides, this update was also to improve security with multi-sig wallets, to make Saitama become more exchange-friendly and move away from the ‘meme token’ category. As it said in a statement: “The V2 contract will see INU finally gone for good and will classify Saitama as a utility token, helping us with our objective to become a top project in this space.”

After the migration, Saitama has real value derived from its ecosystem. If the token’s price history is anything to go on, there certainly seems to be a strong community and demand for it. But can it keep its users engaged and rebound to $0.01 again?

SAITAMA Price History and Current Performance

Overall, SAITAMA is a relatively new token with a bullish beginning.

After launch on 18 June 2021, SAITAMA price opened at $0.000000000004 (four billionths of a cent) and stayed around that level for the next couple of months. However, it didn’t last long before the token began to surge since September 2021, when the project revealed the beta test of its SaitaMask wallet. Saitama price soared more than 100,000% over six months in 2021, setting a new all-time high of $0.0000002777 (2.777 hundred-thousandths of a cent) in November 2021.

However, the token could not retain the position it gained, subsequently sliding strongly and rapidly driven by a number of factors, one of which as Saitama delayed bringing its wallet to the masses, and said it would not be released for several weeks.

In the middle of 2022, Saitama Inu changed its name to Saitama and carried out a token migration to a version two (Saitama v2) to improve its price by reducing the token's supply.

This, however, also did not save Saitama from sliding - Immediately after new Saitama first came onto the open market on 8 June, Saitama v2 price reached an all-time high of $0.007825. Since then, though, the price has plunged dramatically by more than 70% and, on 10 November, it sank to an all-time low of $0.0008. At press time, SAITAMA is trading at $0.0009.

Saitama Inu Price Prediction

Conclusion: Does SAITAMA crypto have a future?

In the current economic climate, it can be difficult to predict the future of any investment. However, some experts believe that the SAITAMA token has the potential to become a good investment.

However, some will say that SAITAMA is a so-called meme coin (although technically, it's a meme token). Meme coins are crypto assets known for their high risks and potential rewards. While there are many meme coins to choose from, only a few have become truly successful. Dogecoin is the exception rather than the rule: most meme coins provide high returns and maintain their maximum prices only for a limited time period. After that, their average prices start falling down with no hope of rising again.

It is only fair that we conclude this section by sounding the warning that SAITAMA is a highly volatile asset. It is also important that we state that the future of SAITAMA Inu may not follow the predictions here. This Saitama Inu price prediction on BTCC is not investment advice in any manner. we recommend you do your own research before making any decision and always be cautious while investing.
