What is the XDC network?

The XDC Network is a blockchain that forked from Ethereum (ETH) and is designed to give businesses the chance to create their own networks. The blockchain has joined the many “Ethereum killers” that aim to escape the problems, such as slowness and cost, that had an impact on the original chain.

It uses a delegated proof-of-stake (POS) consensus mechanism that produces blocks more efficiently. XDC Network boasts on its website that this has allowed it to process more than 2,000 transactions per second and keep a minuscule gas fee.

Explaining the blockchains features, its documentation said:

“Featuring interoperable smart contracts, 2,000 transactions per second, and Ethereum Virtual Machine compatibility, the XDC Network provides a scalable infrastructure for enterprises and independent community contributors.”

Ritesh Kakkad and Atul Khekade are the Singaporean co-founders behind the network, which was originally known as XinFin Network. Kakkad previously co-founded the cloud-hosting company IndSoft Systems in 1998. Khekade graduated with a degree in IT at the Sardar Patel College of Engineering in India and founded a range of startups, such as the private jet service company Airnetz.

XDC Price History

Let's now cast our eyes over the XDC price history. While past performance should never be taken as an indicator of future results, knowing what the coin has done in the past can give us some very useful context when it comes to either making or interpreting an xdc network price prediction.

The XDC token had a tough start to its price history. It launched at $0.002 on 13 April 2018 and fluctuated around this launch price for the next three years.

Not until February 2021 did the cryptocurrency see its first breakout. It rallied to a peak of $0.14, which came after the XDC coin announced a bridge to the cryptocurrency Corda Network. XDC subsequently became the leading token of value on Corda.

XDC came close to that high again on 4 July when it hit $0.12. This happened during the lead up to the token's listing on the BitMart exchange with a tether (USDT) pairing.

The following month it surged to its all-time high of $0.19 on 21 August. XDC had recently become the first blockchain company to join the global TFD initiative. This was an organisation created to improve automation and transparency in the trade asset industry by the ITFA.

After this price record, XDC crashed along with the wider bearish crypto market. Aside from a slight rally on 1 January 2022 past $0.10, it continued falling throughout the new year as a series of market crashes saw it fall to a low of $0.02236 on 30 June. There was then a small recovery, and the coin enjoyed prices above $0.03 in July and August, but things fell down again in the autumn.

XDC suffered in the wake of the collapse of the FTX (FTT) exchange, falling to a low of $0.02032 on 7 December, but it made something of a recovery to $0.025860 on 30 December.

XDC Price: Technical Analysis

XDC made a significant price change in November, reaching a high of around $0.031119. XDC coin has since retraced to the current price of $0.025860, which served as critical support for the month. XDC is up more than 10% in the last 30 days, emerging as the top 10 performers of the month in the entire crypto market.

However, many of the moving average lines are still bearish in the last 24 hours despite the positive outlook of the cryptocurrency in the last month. The SMA 10 crosses above the SMA 20, while the SMA 30 crosses above the SMA 50. This indicates the market might shift into a bullish sentiment in the near term. The current support levels are seen at $0.0250 and $0.0230. On the other hand, the key resistance level which needs to be broken to validate the bullish trend is $0.03074. The next major resistance is near the $0.0316 level, and the price could start a strong upward move toward the $0.0350 level.

XDC has traded in a range of $0.026 to $0.03119 in the last month November, with prices currently testing the $0.025 level, and it has stagnated for the last few weeks. A break out of this level in any direction is imminent as bears and bulls battle for price control, Moreover, it seems the bears are running out of steam as they have not been able to push prices any further downwards. We may expect the bulls to capture the market as the price is approaching the major resistance level of $0.0300.

The bearish market sentiment, however, remains as the Relative Strength Index line is currently residing at 38 levels, an almost oversold region. The MACD line is well placed below the red signal line, indicating a complete bearish cycle. However, bulls might gain the upper hand and push prices to the recent highs of $0.03063 that were seen in mid-September.

In addition, the price of XDC is currently below the 200-day simple moving average (SMA). According to the technical indicators, XDC 200-day SMA will fall during the next month. Since January 2, 2022, the 200-day SMA has been indicating a SELL signal.
