XRP is not a “security” after all

The recent victory of Ripple Labs over the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) has sparked a wave of confidence throughout the crypto sector. The news that XRP is no longer considered a “Security” by Judge Analisa Torres has caused excitement, and now the Coinbase exchange has joined in on the fun by announcing that it will once again make the digital currency available for trade.

Trading of XRP on the XRP network has been restored by Coinbase, the largest cryptocurrency trading platform in the United States. Customers are cautioned against transmitting the bitcoin to other networks by the exchange, however, since doing so could result in the loss of the cryptocurrency forever. If necessary liquidity conditions are reached later today, XRP trading could begin.

The announcement was tweeted out by the exchange, which said trading might start “later today, if liquidity conditions are met.” Our XRP-USD, XRP-USDT, and XRP-EUR trading pairings will become live in stages once a stable supply of this asset has been established. There may be limitations on where XRP is usable.

After the SEC filed litigation against Ripple Labs in December 2020, alleging that XRP was an investment contract, Coinbase delisted XRP. However, following the positive verdict in the case, Coinbase has reinstated XRP, showing renewed faith in the cryptocurrency.

However, other major exchanges, such as Gemini, have also signalled their plan to relist XRP for spot and futures trading, so Coinbase’s decision to relist is evidence of the growing interest in XRP.

As optimism grows, the price of XRP rises to a new high

With the positive momentum for XRP continuing to build, the coin's price has exploded since its relisting on Coinbase. The value of XRP has risen by approximately 74% in the past day, to a current market price of $0.8186. Since its relisting on Coinbase, Bitcoin (BTC) has seen a rise and is once again trading above $31,000, a significant psychological barrier for the cryptocurrency market.

Now that XRP has been relisted on Coinbase, investors and traders have more options for buying and selling the digital currency. This event is a watershed moment in XRP's comeback and revival in the cryptocurrency industry.
